Course Description

Accidents and injuries have both a human and a business cost, so it is advantageous for employees to practice safe behaviors and mitigate unsafe behaviors in the workplace. A culture of Behavioral Based Safety will help focus an employee's attention and actions daily. It will help a company observe and measure the behaviors and attitudes that increase risk and provide important feedback to encourage change.

Having a robust and well managed BBS, a company can benefit from the following:

- Improved job satisfaction
- Improved employee health and well-being
- Reduced costs (medical/absenteeism)
- Reduced or eliminated cost of compensation claims
- Better employee retention rates
- Improved safety awareness
- Improved safety practices
- Reduced accident/incident rates

This workshop introduces behavior-based safety concepts to employees and creates awareness around what influences employees to change unsafe behaviors before an accident or injury happen.
